General Patterson.—The New York World orgues that General Patterson is a treitor. He offers the solutely necessary to enable him to cope with Johnston; end some of the best regiments were sent to him, as thet attack was an essential feature of the attack on Manassas. Then, on the Saturday before the great battle, General Patterson son sent a messenger to Washington to essure the government that he had the most positive exidence that Johnston was still at Winchester, This encouraged the attack on Manassas, for if Johnston had been at Winchester, the government that he had the most positive exidence that Johnston was still at Winchester, This encouraged the attack on Manassas, for if Johnston had been at Winchester, the government that he had the most positive sylvance that Johnston was still at Winchester, This encouraged the attack on Manassas, for if Johnston had been at Winchester, the could not have joined Beauregard before the battle. But on Sunday a second messenger reached Washington General Patterson, saying that he was mistaken the day before, and the botton to late to be istaken the day before, and that Johnston's my had escaped. Then it was too late to be Fairfax. useful. The New York World thinks General Patterson played into the hands of the rebels as effectually as if he had had a perfect understending with them. But it seems, that Gen. Patte son was opposed to the entire campaign, which, we suppose, exonwrates him from taking any share reachers in the world; it is the parent of considerably more than half the treachery of the secessionists in this Commonwealth. The whole course of the miserable set from the beginning has been a game of deerit played to And it most be owned they have played this game with singular conning. Though buffled at every step, every step has been subtly taken. The sucress of any one of their steps would have gone far lowards consummating tried a Southern Convention, hoping through such a body to so link the Border States with the Gulf States that all might be slidden into accession together. 'The step failed; lint no f the step had succeeded the purpose would have been accomplished A formal ultimatum from the South to the North on the heels of the November election would have been simply trampled upon. They next tried a so-called severeignty convention, hoping thereby to resfully in Kentucky the brutal artitices which had prevailed in Alabama and Louistana and other States then as now writhing beneath the pressure of revolutionary terrotism. This step failed also; but if it had not failed the accomplishment of the purpuse would have tollowed only 100 certainly Kentniky may read the fale she Ihus escaped in the fate of Virginia. They then tried reconstruction on an Altimutum consisting of Mr. Crittenden's proposition with the I'owell amendment and several other amendments, hoping in this way to entrap Kentneky into secession knowing, as they did, that the North would reself the ultimatem and that if the North didn't the South would. This step failed like wise; but if it had carried the purpose would have been completed. Kentucky in this event would have had no choice but to back down from the attitude she had deliberately assumed or take the fatel leap into accession. They afterwards tried neutrality in the construction of general nullification and independence, hoping by this means to bring about a collision the insurgent ones on the soil of Kentucky and to corree her into secession by the double force of violence and of fraul. This step too has failed or is failing; though all must perceive how fatally it is adapted to the purpose. There to in many quarters a painful apprehension that the step may yet prosper so far as to representatives of ultraism on the negroquestian break up the peace of the State. And, now, simultaneously with the miscarrying of recognition of the independence of the seceding States for the sake of peace, hoping by dint the influence and position that they possesse of this expedient to pave the way at last for the plunging of Kentucky into secession and to take positions as traitors. Are these honest war, assured, as they and all other sane men truths to be nailed to the counter by the manare, that the voice of Kentucky in favor of neacturers and niterers of the base and con-I ace at the sacrifice of the national existence, temptible coin which we have exposed? il misde the Battery enclosure permitted the progress of the regiment. The police with their clubs at length prevailed.

In Battery place and Broadway, opposite the Bowling Green, the surging mass seemed immovable. Cheers went up from thousands of throats, and hats and bonnets and coats were awung in the air with almost frantic enthusiasm. The scene fairly beggars description. Such another was probably never witnessed in New York. After a hall and the forning of the regiments in a narrow column, the crowd was parted, and the volunteers, every one of whom felt himself a hero, passed into Broadway.

A continuous roar, a clapping of hands, cheering and yells of delight attended every step. The great crowd becams a great procession. Old women crowded up to the lines and held umbrellas over their returning sons. Little boys and girls crowded alongside of their fathers, and hung to their clothing. The men in the ranks were pulled in all directions, and what ought to have been a march in platoon became a walk through a mass of humanity.

In the confusion of the return, particulars of the loases of the Sixty-ninth could not be obtained. It is said that about twelve hundred of the tifteen hundred men who made up the regiment, have returned. leaving three hundred to cover the number of killed, wounded, and missing.

Two or three men were killed on the way home. The name of one was Fleming, who was knecked off the top of a car by a bridge uniler which it was passing.

Thos, Francis Meagher, whose horse was shot under him, and who fell into the water at Bull's Run, swam away and escaped. He was in the ranks this morning.

McBowellia aids had brought the glad nowe that we were victorious, and up to that time undoubtedly we were. Hut Gen. Schenck, occupying a prominent position on the Uninesville road, saw a large lody of the enemy marching in between his brigade and Hunter's division. At the same time, three different hatteries, that for nearly an hour, had been silent, euddenly opened again, and he saw that Hunter's division would be cut to pieces, and their only road to Centreville closed, if something were not done at once. He immediately ordered two pieces of Carliale's battery to the farthest point on the Gainesville road towards Marassas, and luinging up the First thin and Second New York to sustain them, opened mon the enemy and their batteries.

He held this position until the trops gathered between him and Hunter were dispersed and the obstructions placed upon the bridge were cut away, when he fell back in good order. The result of this was to open the road to Centreville, and prevent the evident attack on the rear contemplated by the Confederates. In a a word, he contributed greatly to save the army from total destruction.

I bear that the Confederate Commissioners are at Paria, and ont of money. They had to leave the Hotel de Leuvre on account of not possessing sufficient l'argent? THE UNION CAPSE MUST TRIUMPH.-The Bal-&c., call at Alexander, Ellis & Co.'s planing mill, sash, door, and blind factory and lumber yard, on The strange spectacle was presented on Sunday last of two great armies running away from each other, each believing itself defeated after a whole day'e hard fighting. The rebels had been fairly whipped. They were driven hack two miles from their position at the beginning of the engagement, and were actually retreating, when a ridiculous psnic was spread through Gen. McDowell's forces, and they commenced running the other way. If it were not so grave a subject, it would indeed excite laughter. General Zuchary Taylor used to say of our volunteers in Mexico, that they didn't know when they were whipped, but kept on fighting.

At Buena Vista they were, according to military tactics, defeated three times, but they did not recognize the fact and fought on until Santa Anna took the back truck. It appears from the conduct of the volunteers on Sunday that they don't know when they are victorious. This sort of knowledge is very essential. It would have made a material sifference on this occasion. If the advantages gained by the Union troops of the bull's Run had been maintained, the wer would have been of short duration. As it is, the nuly Fulton street, just above Preston, fronting the river, or at their lumber yard, corner of Walnut, and Preston streets, or leave your orders at their warerooms on Main street, nearly opposits the Galt House, Lonisville, Ky. janl tf

What Flanters should be with the Coming Cotton Crop.—As the time is fast approaching when the new cotton crop will be ready for market, we would say a word about the matter to Southern planters. The probability is that the Confederate Government will pursue the policy of which we have been the constant advocate in common with several returnments.

that the Confederate Government will pursue the policy of which we have been the constant advocate in common with several contemporative, to-wir. Purchase the entire crop so as to exercise exclusive control over it, paying for it in government bonds and treasury noise. A resolution to this effect has, in fact, already been introduced into Congress and referred to an appropriate committee for action.

However this mey be, unless the Confederate substitutes order otherwise, not one bale of cotton should be sent to any of the great cotton marts until there is some definite understanding in regard to that policy foreign powers intend adopting in reference to lincold a paper blockade. The New Orleans factors, we notice, are calling upon the planters to pursue this course, a fact which exhibits their self sacrificing particitism. Let every man who cwms so much as a single bale of this invaluable staple keep if at home.

Should the usual guantity that is brought to this city alone—asy 400,000 bales—be stored in our warehouse this fall, and continue to lithere without the leastprobability of a sale, the templation offered the enemy to essaw its capture would be extremely great, particularly as the staple will be very scarce throughout the North the coming winter. It would be tantamount indeed to offering the enormous sum of 250,000,000 as a loous upon the invasion of the Ministriphy willey and a special of agreement of the members of the particularly as the staple of the sum of the members of the particularly as the staple will be very scarce throughout the North the coming winter.
